

Walking is recognised as the most cost-effective way of improving physical health and, along with cycling, provides a sustainable form of transport.

