

Walking is recognised as the most cost-effective way of improving physical health and provides a sustainable form of transport.

